Adventure for all

Scouting ensures that young people have access to adventure – it's been that way since the beginning. We have always encouraged young people to get outside, make friends and start creating their own adventures. This issue of Scouting showcases just some of those adventures. On page 20 you can read about a Group of surfing Scouts in Cornwall and the leaders who are making sure everyone can have a go – no matter what.

Scouting has always opened young people's eyes to the world of promise and possibilities around them. On page 41, you can read about the very first adventures of some of our members; even though they took place in the last 50 years, the spirit of adventure and excitement hasn't changed a single bit.

For young Scouts the simplest adventures can make the most powerful memories and can lead to the most incredible opportunities. How many of you remember climbing hills as a kid; feeling like you were on top of the world as you ran (or rolled) back down them? That's how members of the Hampshire Mountaineering Team got started – you can read about their latest trip to Scotland, where they hone their winter mountaineering skills, on page 34.

You can read about how I developed my taste for adventure on page 26, where you'll also find an exciting bit of news about my future as Chief Scout.

Of all the things that Scouts do and learn, for me, there are two that stick out: following your dreams and looking after your friends. Each and every story in this issue is a fantastic example of both of these qualities, and I hope you find them as inspirational as I do.

Scouting WANTS YOU!

We asked the UK Youth Commissioner Team to tell us about their most memorable adventures. We also want to hear about your exploits, so head to our Facebook page to share them and email scouting.magazine@scouts.org.uk to sign up to our reader panel.

Hannah Kentish – UK Youth Commissioner

'I first started having adventures as a 10-year-old Scout. Rock-climbing was one of the first things I did and I loved it; I also got to go on my first summer camp shortly after joining and didn't want to go home! This summer I will be off to the Philippines to complete my Scouts of the World award after the Jamboree – I'm so excited!'

Jay Thompson – Deputy UK Youth Commissioner

'Having grown up on the Isle of Man, I've been lucky enough to have plenty of outdoor adventures on my doorstep. My most memorable adventure has to be travelling to Tuvalu, in the South Pacific, when I was 18. I had the challenge of taking the Scout spirit of adventure to somewhere it had all but disappeared, and it was one of the most rewarding things I've ever done.'

Jagz Bharth – Deputy UK Youth Commissioner

'I can't remember a time when I wasn't a Scout and I've tried to go on as many adventures as possible – some obvious stand-outs being leading a Group on our Queen's Scout Award expedition to Peru and the World Scout Jamboree in Denmark where I made friends who I'm still in touch with. I love exploring beyond where I live – I'm trying to make sure the Cubs and Scouts I lead get to have as much adventure as I did!'

Everyday adventure

It attracts hundreds of young people to Scouting every year, but our brand of adventure offers so much more than exhilaration alone, says the UK Chief Commissioner

Whether you're talking about a Beaver's first nature walk or a Cub's first hike, adventure is at the core of Scouting's popularity. I certainly remember some of my own first adventures with Scouts as a boy, as well as leading my Patrol in some of their early adventures – whether that was on an overnight rowing expedition on the River Hamble or a hike across the South Downs as a Venture Scout.

By supporting these youth-led activities, we are building on our ambitions to be shaped by young people in partnership with adults. And it is these adventures – and the growing awareness of Scouting's particular brand of everyday adventure – that encourages young people to join our Movement. It is also the means by which we provide the opportunities for young people of all ages to learn a variety of invaluable life skills: teamwork, leadership and resilience to name just a few.

Our young people will learn teamwork, leadership and resilience from Scouting's brand of adventure

'We will put the outdoors, adventure, teamwork and leadership at the very core of our refreshed youth programme'

That's also why we're kicking off Cubs 100, our centenary of Cub Scouts with the Year of Adventure this year. Here we will put the outdoors, adventure, teamwork and leadership at the very core of our refreshed youth programme, ensuring that a whole new generation of young people continues to learn by doing through the medium of our particular brand of everyday adventure.

We've teamed up with six amazing like-minded charities in a bid to make a long-lasting impact in communities throughout the UK. A Million Hands is a project that reflects our ambition to mobilise our half a million people and team up with other charities to support four social issues chosen by our young people. The Scout Association, alongside Alzheimer's Society, WaterAid, Guide Dogs for the Blind, Leonard Cheshire Disability, The Canal and River Trust, and Mind have formed a groundbreaking partnership to provide young people with the support and the means to make a real and lasting difference in their communities.

The four issues we will focus on are:

- improving mental wellbeing and resilience of families, Scout Groups and broader society;
- improving the lives of those affected by dementia;
- improving the lives of those disabled by society;

- ensuring everyone everywhere has access to clean water and sanitation.

Selected by young people, the charities in this partnership are reflective of the issues they care most about in society. Resources that will help Groups carry out social action, make a real difference right on their doorstep and help them achieve their Community Impact Badge will be available soon.

NETWORK IS CHANGING

Are you ready for the changes to Scout Network? All 18–25-year olds in Scouting will become members of the Scout Network, either through a local District Scout Network or the UK Scout Network. There will be activities centred on the three themes of adventure, international and community, as well opportunities to lead, work in teams and further develop life skills. All of this will be compatible with other roles that 18–25 year olds have in Scouting. It's an exciting time to be part of the Network reboot. For all the latest information, check out prepared.scouts.org.uk/network.

Let the adventure begin

The Cubs' Year of Adventure is now officially underway! With the Cubs' 100th birthday celebrations taking place in 2016, we're using 2015 as a warm-up to the biggest year in Cubs history. From now until December 2015 we're encouraging Cub Packs across the UK to get involved in adventurous activities each and every month. The Year of Adventure is all about giving Cub Scouts the opportunity to enjoy the exhilaration and challenge of adventurous activities. There are fantastic resources available at scouts.org.uk/cubs100, as well as exciting activity ideas to keep you and your Cubs adventuring until 2016. Activity ideas cover land, sea, air, technology and more, so there's something to please everyone. Also, this issue of Scouting magazine comes with a brilliant Year of Adventure resource, which contains even more activity ideas for you and your Cubs. Enjoy the adventure!

ONWARDS AND UPWARDS

The re-energised Scout Programme is now in full swing and places more emphasis on outdoor adventure. Badges have been refreshed for each section; some have had their requirements updated, some are brand new and some have been discontinued. To coincide with the release of the revised programme we have also refreshed the five section brands and new resources for each section are available to purchase now from Scout Shops. If you have questions regarding the refresh, check out the FAQ at scouts.org.uk/programmeupdates and take a look at prepared.scouts.org.uk for an overview.

Don't forget to let us know how you're getting on with the refreshed programme by emailing programme@scouts.org.uk.

PROMOTE THE ADVENTURE

A wide range of materials is now available to help you promote Scouting's life-changing adventure. New templates for meeting place signs, featuring the updated section branding, are now available in a choice of sizes and colours. A range of inspirational posters based on artwork from the new Prepared book can now be ordered and you can also create personalised Challenge Award certificates for young people in Scouting. There are also car sticker designs available for your back window and to fit inside your old tax disc holders! Log in at scouts.org.uk and click on 'Print Centre' to get started. Don't forget to order your new programme materials from scouts.org.uk/shop.

FEEL THE PRIDE

Volunteers will hit the streets of the capital again this year to celebrate diversity. Scouts took part in a fantastic London Pride celebration last year – the sixth year that we've attended this LGBT event – and for the first time, we were joined by young people between the ages of 16 and 18.

To get involved in this year's event, being held on 27 June, visit scouts.org.uk/pride or email pride@scouts.org.uk to find out how you can celebrate Pride in your community.

A NEW ERA

From September 2015 onwards, Scouting magazine will be printed four times a year instead of six. This follows a year-long review with senior volunteers and staff at operations committee level and takes into account the results of last year's reader survey. Producing the magazine four times a year will also reduce postage costs so we can better deliver the 2018 strategy. The new and improved magazine will still contain all your essential info from HQ and plenty of activity ideas aimed to inspire and inform you in your daily Scouting. We're still keen to hear more of your opinions on the magazine, so our June/July issue will include a short reader survey where you can share your views.

★ STAR LETTER Our Vision

Youth-shaped Scouting has to be one of the Movement's most positive and important ideas so far. Here in Easingwold District, a mainly rural part of North Yorkshire, it has immediately struck a chord with young people and adults alike. We have the advantage of a brand new District Executive formed to embrace Vision 2018 and build on the successes of 104 years of Scouting in the area. With invaluable guidance from regional development officer Peter Thorp, our four Groups are making good progress.

Involving young people in every area of planning is less problematic, and more transformative, than some of us feared. We have only just started on the journey but already we have a 17-year-old Explorer Scout as a member of the District Executive and a 14-year-old in one Group Executive and taking an active role in a District Sub Committee set-up to plan community impact events. Their participation has undoubtedly changed our meetings for the better.

The focus on young people's ideas in section planning is already making waves too. We arranged a leaders' skills training evening (section meetings were cancelled that week to reduce the burden on adults' time) to ensure that everyone is on board with what we want to achieve. The next week, one leader reported she'd been stumped by a request to create electronic circuits, and turned to the District to request a skills audit of volunteers and parents to find people to help. Youth-shaped Scouting threw up an opportunity, a problem and a solution all at once.

Vision 2018 will certainly be a challenge but with youth-shaped Scouting at its core, in Easingwold District at least, it feels genuinely achievable.

REAL TROOPERS CORNWALL COUNTY

Members: 4,400 members.

Did you know?

2013 saw the revival of the Kernow Jamboree on the Pencarrow Estates with 1,000 attendees from across Cornwall, the UK and Units from Europe and Uganda. The next one is to be held in 2017.

SURE'S UP!

Scouts in Cornwall take their adventure to the waves...

'It's such a confidence boost for young people – the look of excitement on their faces is incredible.'

SIMON VILES, DISTRICT EXPLORER SCOUT COMMISSIONER

Though early spring isn't nearly warm enough for most people to venture into the waters of Cornwall, Explorer Scouts from throughout the District have gathered at Harlyn Bay beach on a chilly afternoon in February to brave the waves.

Surfing is a side of Scouting we rarely see, but watching the Explorers enthusiastically sprint to the waves with their boards in tow, you can see why this is an activity that's surely set to become a Scout classic.

'Surfing is a unique Scout activity. It clears the cobwebs. Sitting out on the waves is an amazing feeling – there's nothing quite like it.' Simon Viles is District Explorer Scout Commissioner for Stenek Ha'n Mor District in Cornwall and he's keen to spread the word about surfing. Simon's the kind of leader who's into the bigger activities and though he admits to being thrilled by every aspect of his Scouting, his true passion lies in outdoor adventure and he's keen to pass as much of this enthusiasm on to his Explorers as possible.

Something different

Surfing is an alternative challenge for young people, delivering a real sense of accomplishment. Leaders and volunteers all over Cornwall are set on making Surfing a Scouting favourite.

Sally Bartlett, a former Beaver and Cub parent, Scout leader and then finally, member of The Scout Association's Regional Development Service (RDS), is now very much part of a Scouting family in Cornwall. Surfing is something she's passionate about sharing. She's even been known to tread the waters herself.

'I'm not a seasoned pro – I sort of body board and scream! I'd never gone into the water in England as I grew up in Venezuela, but I was challenged to go and have a few surfing lessons. By the second lesson I managed to stand on the board. My love of water has grown so I now go in once a month – I love it. My son now also has the surfing bug and goes in all weathers.'

Sally's son, Harry, developed a passion for surfing through Scouts and is now keen on anything outdoors related. 'I started to surf at surf camp – it was one of my first Scout camps and we stayed at Nine Ashes in Bodmin and travelled to Harlyn Bay,' says Harry. 'We had two days of surfing and I loved it from the minute we started.'

Now Harry is older and can drive, he and his friends chase the waves throughout Cornwall, travelling to the north coast to surfing hotspots like Polzeath, Perranporth or Hayle. ❖

Sally Bartlett discovered surfing through Scouting years ago and hasn't looked back since

REAL TROOPERS

Sally's son, Harry, has likewise caught the surfing bug and now chases waves all around the Cornish coast

Whether paddling out into the sea or testing their mettle on a simulator, Scouts gain so much from surfing

Blipp here to see if your Group would enjoy paddling out

To introduce some Scouts to the world of surfing, Simon recently took a group of Scouts to Retallack Spa and Resort in Cornwall to experience the FlowRider wave simulator, which gives everyone the chance to surf all year round. Well and truly making surfing accessible to all, facilities like this sidestep the various restrictions with surfing in the ocean, such as weather, safety or lack of waves.

And it's not just Cornwall that offers the chance to surf. There are facilities all over the UK that offer water adventure, from indoor wave simulators to full-on surf schools. There are schools in Wales, Scotland, Northern Ireland and the north of England and surfing opportunities can be found in the most unlikely places. 'I've surfed in north Scotland, south-west Wales and I know people that have surfed in Bournemouth,' says Simon. 'I've even surfed in Scarborough.'

Anyone and everyone can have a go at surfing and the rewards from getting out onto the water are seemingly endless.

'There's definitely something special about surfing,' says Sally. 'There's nothing quite like it. You can really lose yourself and nothing else matters. It's also amazing fun!'

Special thanks go to Harlyn Surf School (harlynsurfschool.co.uk) and Retallack Resort (retallackresort.co.uk) for allowing us access for the purpose of this feature.

✦ 'Riding a great wave all the way onto the beach is ace, as is meeting new people and making new friends,' says Harry. 'I've also had some great opportunities being able to travel and I'm now making a career of the outdoor adventure sports industry.'

'It's such a confidence boost for young people,' adds Simon. 'The look of excitement on their faces is incredible. Seeing someone stand on the board for just a few seconds is an amazing sight. They're so proud and they're buzzing all day from it.'

A Scouting essential

Though surfing may seem like an idyllic luxury for Scouts in Cornwall, it's also a necessity.

'Cornwall is stunning, but living in such a rural peninsula has its problems,' says Simon. 'For us to go anywhere is an epic journey – if we ever wanted to go to Gilwell 24 in London for example, the travel costs are really expensive.'

While most people think of Cornwall as being picturesque and idyllic, the county contains some of the most deprived areas in the UK, containing pockets of deprivation that are in the top 5% of the country – comparable to inner-city London, Manchester and Birmingham.

'There's not a lot of money down here at all – it's not all beautiful harbours and beaches,' says Simon. 'But this is when something like surfing can be really important to young people. You can buy a relatively cheap second-hand board and a cheaper wetsuit and then that's it – you just need to get to the beach. We also run surf events for £15 and the young people get all the equipment they need.'

Surfing for all

Simon makes sure that everyone can have a go at surfing, no matter what their ability. 'A surf school instructor, for example, will take out a young person with additional needs and accompany them on the water. Everyone can experience this kind of fun.'

'What's great about Cornwall, is with the inland rivers, the transitional stages from Beavers to Cubs to Scouts are really easy to navigate when it comes to water activities,' adds Sally. 'You have the indoor pools for the younger Scouts – so they get that first feeling of what it's like being on the sea and what being on a boat feels like in complete safety and in a less intimidating environment.'

A TASTE FOR ADVENTURE

The Chief Scout talks about his inspiration, his passion for the outdoors and his love of all things Scouting

The very first adventure I ever had was when I was about four or five; I slept out under the stars. I had to sneak out without telling my parents, with only my sleeping bag for warmth. That moment felt really special; there was such a sense of achievement, of doing something new, exciting and life enhancing. It was amazing, but I did get in trouble the next day.

'Some years later, my own son, Jesse, had a go at doing the same thing; camping just outside our back door. He was absolutely determined to camp despite the freezing conditions, but by midnight his fingers looked distinctly blue and he had to abandon ship.

'My kids are all into adventure now though – it's great actually, because they push me out of my comfort zone too. Huckleberry was nagging me to go snowboarding recently, and it's not one of my favourite activities. But as soon as he sensed he was losing the battle, he reminded me how I always tell him how important it is to step out of your comfort zone and sure enough, we went out in the snow that morning.

My inspiration

'So, where did my own sense of adventure come from? I can say without a doubt that it was my dad who gave me my taste for adventure. I grew up on the Isle of Wight and have great memories of learning to climb on the sea cliffs and making rafts with him. He was truly inspirational. He always told me not to be afraid and taught me it was OK to take risks. In his eyes, failure was just a stepping stone to success.

'As well as igniting my adventurous spirit, my dad also encouraged me to be a good friend to people. Making friends, keeping friends, having fun with your friends... It's a message that has stayed with me throughout my childhood and into my adult life and career. This naturally led me to Scouts I think; we give young people the chance to make lifelong friendships and nothing does this better than adventure – and believe me, nothing solidifies a relationship like a heart-pounding moment in the outdoors!

Not enough hours in the day

'I still get as excited and energetic about adventures as I did when I first snuck out of the house all those years ago. It doesn't seem to matter where I am – I experience such a feeling of belonging when I step outside to get my teeth into something new. It's hard to pin down what that is exactly, but, at the heart of it I think, the outdoors is free. Your imagination can inspire the greatest adventures. Scouts may have changed since I was a kid, but the principle is still the same: providing these great adventures to any child who wants them. That's why I love being Chief Scout and that's what I love about Scouts.

'I love that you don't have to know everything at once – you've just got to show up and give it your all. There's something special about being surrounded by people of exactly the same mind set – it doesn't matter whether you're camping on a mountain or receiving your Queen's Scout Award, the atmosphere is exactly the same: optimistic, ambitious, friendly and proud.

'I also love the electric atmosphere of hundreds – even thousands – of Scouts enjoying an adventure together. I was lucky enough to go to Sweden in 2001 for the Jamboree and see 40,000 young people from around the world working together

'My dad gave me my taste for adventure – in his eyes, failure was just a stepping stone to success.'

Bear inherited his love of adventure from his dad and makes sure he passes this passion on to his own children i Scout!

By (Christ Scout)

‘There’s something special about being surrounded by people of exactly the same mind set.’

— it really was a sight to behold. I’m absolutely gutted I can’t make it over to Japan for this year’s Jamboree, but if anyone reading this is lucky enough to be going, take it from me, my spirit will definitely be with you.

‘Thankfully I’ve had plenty of chances beyond the Jamboree to meet Scouts and it’s been an absolute blast. My Bear in the Air adventures, for example, gave me the chance to hop on a helicopter and travel around the UK meeting lots of Groups while getting involved in some great activities with them all. If there were simply more hours in the day, I’d visit every Scout Group on the planet. The count currently stands at meeting around 100,000 of you in the UK in the last five years. And it still feels like the best part of my job!

More adventure

‘I know how many of you share my passion and conviction in the importance of offering outdoor adventures to our Scouts and it’s thanks to you that we’re able to offer kids the opportunities of a lifetime –

I’m overjoyed that the recent programme refresh reflects this.

‘The refresh is packed with loads of activity badges for all sections and places more emphasis on getting out there and experiencing outdoor adventure. This is music to my ears and gives us the chance to keep Scouting exciting for a whole new generation of young people (as well as the leaders!).

‘I get so much pleasure from teaching my boys the outdoor skills you learn at Scouts, from watching them have fun, and they get so much from the adventures we have together. It’s funny, talking about all of this makes me think of a photo of me and my dad; the two of us together in this little boat – it’s so reminiscent of photos of me and my boys today. It’s obvious to me that the adventures we had together inspired my passion for the outdoors, and that’s what we’re able to give to each and every young person who comes through Scouts.

CONGRATULATIONS, CHIEF SCOUT!

We’re delighted to announce that Bear will continue in his role as UK Chief Scout beyond the usual five-year term to help us achieve our 2018 vision and he’s super excited about it! Bear said: ‘I am so proud that the largest youth movement on the planet has asked me to stay on as its UK Chief Scout. Between now and 2018 I plan to do all that I possibly can to help the Movement to continue to grow, become more reflective of the communities in which we work and change the lives of even more young people. In addition, I really want to give young people a powerful voice at the very heart of the Movement so they can actively help shape and develop the future of the Movement for the next 100 years.’

FROM SCOTLAND TO THE SOUTH POLE

Guest writer Polly Bennett braves the biting winds of the snow-capped Scottish mountains to meet some of Scouting's boldest pioneers

Pictures: Rupert Shanks

Check out Polly and HSX in action by Blipping here

'This week is ideal training for Antarctica' – the conditions on the Cairngorms give HSX (and Polly) a taste of things to come Ooof...' I fall flat on my face for the twentieth time, my head resting on a patch of ice while my legs are buried under a pile of snow. Sighing, I untangle my limbs and launch myself back up the hill, but the wind has other ideas. With unbelievable force it slams me to the ground again. The rest of the group are already small dots high up the slope, but I have only walked 700m. I can still see the van in the car park.

A hand grabs the top of my rucksack, keeping me steady as I start again. This is just one technique that 21-year-old Joe Doherty uses to get me up the mountain. He's very patient, never making me feel weak for struggling to hike just two miles.

But this is no ordinary hike. We're in the Cairngorm mountains in Scotland and the February wind is beating down the slopes at 60mph, so I don't feel too guilty about needing so much help from Joe. After all, dragging me up this mountain is nothing compared to the unbelievable endeavour that he is here to train for: skiing to the South Pole and back as part of the first Scout-led expedition to Antarctica in 2018.

Practice makes perfect

I'm spending a few days with Hampshire Scout Expeditions (HSX) – a group that specialises in taking Scouts, Explorers and adult members on adventurous trips in the UK and abroad. They spend a week in the Cairngorms every year, practising winter mountaineering skills. As well as being essential preparation for big expeditions like Antarctica, the trip introduces younger Scouts to new activities and experiences.

On this, the group's first day, we head for a corrie nestled within a crease of the mountain. Carved into dramatic lumps of granite by ancient glaciers, the Cairngorms are an ideal location for winter expeditions. Steep snow fields are the perfect place to practise using ice axes and crampons.

'This week is ideal training for Antarctica, physically and psychologically,' Joe tells me as we continue our ascent. 'We want to undertake an expedition that has never been done within Scouting and to do that we need as much experience of winter conditions as possible.' On the slope above us, Dave and twin brothers Ollie and Tom, also members of the Antarctica team, are already practising their mountaineering skills.

School of survival

After much huffing and puffing, Joe deposits me with the rest of the group. There's cheery applause as I slump against a bank of snow, grinning at having finally made it to our outdoor classroom. Today is dedicated to lessons, or a re-cap for some, in basic winter mountaineering. Wasting no time, Polly completes her two-mile hike... just in time for the real training to begin!

Nick teaches the group about ice axe arrests, a technique that could save their lives if they slip in Antarctica

‘We want to undertake an expedition that has never been done within Scouting’

JOE DOHERTY, SCOUT

we gather eagerly for our first task: ice axe arrests.

Ice axe arrests are one of the most fundamental mountaineering skills. They can stop your fall if you find yourself sliding down a mountainside. In short, they can save your life. Nick, a seasoned mountaineer and HSX member since 1988, shows us the technique. We take turns to slide fast down the slope, on our backs, our fronts, head first and feet first, in order to practise. It's incredible fun and an element of friendly competition encourages everyone to perfect their skills.

Feels like family

The close-knit group of 13 are a truly friendly bunch and range from 15-year-old Scouts on their first trip to Scotland, to leaders in their 20s preparing for Antarctica, to the HSX founders (age carefully not divulged) leading the way.

Russ, a qualified mountain leader and retired police officer, founded HSX in 1985 after Hampshire Scouting began a county-wide initiative to organise overseas expeditions. He's taken Scouts, Explorers and older members to Nepal, Belize, Gambia, Sri Lanka and many more countries on six-week expeditions. As well as big adventurous challenges, such as trekking to Everest Base Camp, all expeditions involve a community project, such as building a school or re-painting a monastery, and working with a local Scouting Group where possible.

However, Russ is proud that HSX doesn't just give young people

Antarctica 2018

Six members of the HSX team, lead by Quarter Master Tom Robinson, will attempt to ski to the South Pole and then kite-ski back, all completely unassisted. During this expedition, the team will cover a total distance of 2,300km, carry 100kg of food, fuel and equipment, and face temperatures as low as -50C and wind speeds of up to 80 miles an hour, all in 24-hour daylight. Follow their progress at hsx.org.uk.

The founders of HSX believe these excursions teach Scouts invaluable life skills, helping them go on to become leaders and organisers fun experiences but trains them to become expedition leaders and create a Scouting family that will provide lifelong support to its members. 'We've taken around 600 young people through our programme, many of whom have stayed on in a leadership role or who come back periodically, like Nick this week, to train the younger members in certain skills.' Russ was awarded an MBE in 2009 for his services to Scouting.

It's this camaraderie, as well as technical training, that sets HSX and its members apart from others and gives them the experience and resources to organise ambitious expeditions such as Antarctica 2018.

Over lunch on the mountain, Joe tells me more: 'We've done a lot of great things, but we've never been to Antarctica and so we decided to be the first Scout team to ski to the South Pole and back, unsupported.'

Just the beginning

For the rest of the day we carve into the mountainside with our axes to make bucket seats and use various techniques to climb near-vertical sections of the slope.

Josh, a 16-year-old Scout from Hampshire, has a great time hurtling down the hill. He's gotten pretty good at ice axe arrests after the morning's training. He's been a member of HSX for two years and is candid in describing his experiences so far: 'I went to Nepal with HSX on their 2013 expedition because I loved the idea of going to Everest Base Camp.' He continues: 'I think I was quite immature before that trip, but being in HSX made me grow up. The training for Nepal taught me that if you're childish then you might hurt yourself or someone else. I've since organised a training weekend in the Brecon Beacons for the group.

I had to do the accounts, get everyone there – it was a real learning curve.'

'I can't wait to get back...' he continues before he and I are both knocked to the ground again, the wind seemingly adamant that even the hike back down the mountain won't be easy. Laughing and dusting the snow off his rucksack Josh carries on: 'I just can't wait to get back out here tomorrow.'

As for me, I too am itching to get back out on the mountain. Despite the wind and cold and how tough the going has been, it's been an amazing experience and I've learned so much. In terms of Antarctica, however, I think I'll leave that to the HSX experts! 🧊

Adventure Down Under

'In 1957 we took the steam train from Brisbane, Queensland, to a little town in the country. We hiked over the Great Dividing Range – Australia's largest mountain range – and made it to the Obi Obi Gorge. It was my first Scout camp, and the memory will live with me forever.'

BRYAN BROWN

Braving the chill

'We braved the snow to sleep in shelters we built from rope and a plastic tarpaulin, did backwoods cooking on a little fire and managed to do the whole thing with a group of Scouts we'd never met before. It certainly threw me in at the deep end – I was totally new to Scouting – and I was cold, hungry and out of my depth. Twenty-four hours later I had lit my fire, met new people and couldn't wait for my next adventure!'

ALEX PEATFIELD

The Family way

'My first Scouting adventure was at a Beaver sleepover at a winter Camp with my son. I was eight months pregnant at the time, so getting into the top bunk was a bit of a challenge! My newborn daughter joined us on the next camp aged eight days, and is now in her second year of Beavers!'

KAREN CAIRNEY

Tea with the Queen

'When I was eight, I made tea for the Queen in Buckingham Palace – she even sipped a bit! I was a Cub at the time, and I remember fighting our way up to London and joining some other Cub Packs sitting on the gravel to watch the Changing of the Guard up close. We were led inside the palace and taken to a little room where we were given advice on how to make and pour the tea, before being taken to an enormous room with sofas at one end, where the Queen was sitting. We were given lots of compliments on the tea before being whisked off to explore London!'

JON NORMAN

Messing about in boats

'My first adventure was also at my first Scout camp at West Warwickshire Millennium camp in 1999. The camp was entirely flooded out – people were forced to canoe from one end to the other. It was great!'

SAMANTHA SMITH

The more, the merrier

'I was at university about 30 years ago when I had my first Scouting adventure. One of my housemates was a Cub Leader, and she asked me to come along and help on a weekend hike. I can't remember how many miles we were hiking for, but we carried everything with us and ended up setting up our tents in a farmer's field. Totally shattered by the time we came home, but what a weekend!'

KATHRYN BAGNALL

An unexpected excursion

'When I was 11, our leader told us we were doing a sponsored hike. He was new to the Troop, and when we set off we were expecting a canal walk. In actual fact we found ourselves climbing one of the ridges in the Black Mountains in Wales – clearly our leader wanted us to have as many new experiences as possible! Twenty-five miles later, with blistered feet and sore shoulders from my new rucksack, I was one tired but happy Scout!'

MIKE GIBBS

A mobile unit

'My first adventure was when we went to a Scout Camp in Llandegla, in Wales, from our hut in Crosby. One of the Troop's fathers had a proper furniture lorry, and we were allowed to camp in the back of it with all of our kit! When we got to our destination, we used a full-size handcart to push and pull our gear to the field we were camping in, which was a mile away.'

CHRIS DODD

Into the wild

'My first adventure with Scouts was when I went on a camp to Sweden aged 13. We spent a week camping in the woods in a real back-to-basics style: cooking on altar fires, felling trees and swimming in the lake! We hiked to a secluded location where we built shelters and spent the night under the stars by the lake. It was incredible, and before my adventure to Sweden I had not been abroad without my parents.'

VOLUNTEER IN PROFILE

'Adventure just means stepping out of your comfort zone'

Ben Scholes, Deputy Commissioner for Adventure is all about upping the game...

I was in Cubs, Scouts and Ventures when I was younger and part of the 2nd Haxby and Wigginton Scout Group in York. Keeping me busy was essential to keep me out of trouble! I loved it and still do.

I manage an awesome team of volunteers who work hard to help other adult volunteers deliver adventure to Scouts. The team includes dedicated technical advisers who are specialists in their chosen activities, so you're in good hands.

There are tonnes of opportunities available to Scouts and with the recent Programme refresh, with an emphasis on young people experiencing adventure, there's never been a greater time to up your game and take on something new and exciting. At Scouts, adventure just means stepping out of your comfort zone and is different for everyone. For some it might be playing an instrument on the stage; for others it's climbing to the top of the climbing wall. That feeling of excitement or the unknown is only the start of a great adventure. Scouting is the perfect tool to give those experiences to young people.

I've experienced loads of adventures with the Scouts; the most memorable was my Explorer Belt expedition in Poland. I was 16 and, partnered with a great friend, we set off to walk 100 miles in Poland over 10 days and undertake 10 challenges, which included milking a Polish cow and having our hair cut by Polish barbers!

We can make sure all young people experience adventure, big and small, by giving them plenty of opportunities to take part in different activities, events and outdoor learning – there will always be an activity or programme idea that will get them hooked on something. Once you've worked out what makes a young person tick, keep feeding them with inspiration and ideas and watch them grow. There's an army of Beaver, Cub, Scout, Explorer and Network leaders all over the UK, each delivering quality experiences and adventures to over half a million young people. Now that is truly awesome!

[Your problems SOLVED]

From kit and camping queries to how to bring adventure to your Scout Group, our panel of experts is here to answer your questions

I'm taking my Group camping for four nights. There's so much advice out there – is there one good source I can refer to?

Kerry Sullivan, Scout Leader

Should I buy leather or fabric hiking boots?

Marianne Dagger, Explorer Scout Leader

Steven Lewis, Scout Shops Sales Office Manager, says:

People are attracted to fabric boots thinking leather boots are heavy and stiff; this is not the case anymore. It is worth taking a fresh look at leather boots – have a look at Scout Shops outdoor equipment section at shop.scouts.org.uk. Generally leather boots are known for ruggedness and greater weather protection due to waterproofing treatments, whereas the breathability of fabric boots makes them most suitable for hot and dry conditions. Many fabric boots incorporate breathable waterproof membranes such as Gore-Tex™, but the outer fabric still requires treating with a waterproofing agent.

How can I take better photos in order to promote our Scout Group?

Rajan Nadaraja, Media Development Manager

Justin Mullender, Head of Communications, Strategy and Planning at The Scout Association, says:

If you carry a smartphone, use it to take photos and video clips of your everyday Scouting and select the best images and clips that tell a good Scouting story. Share them directly from your phone via social media, emailed to a Scout website or newsletter, or directly to journalists with a press release. Don't forget to take photos and video that promote our brand values: everyday adventure and challenge, fun and friendship, positive impact.

You can also help to promote Scouting positively by getting your subject to wear a Scout scarf, activity gear or an item of i.Scout clothing. For further ideas check out the tips at scouts.org.uk/videotips and scouts.org.uk/images.

Samantha Marks, National Development Officer (Safeguarding), says:

As well as resources like the 'Nights Away' and the practical and planning advice that staff at UKHQ can offer, don't forget that we can also offer advice on planning for the social and emotional aspects of going away. Having new experiences and adventures means leaders need to prepare young people (and themselves) for the emotional impact, as well as how they think about the interests and wellbeing of young people while away. We're here to help you make sure our yellow card can be put into practice at all times.

The staff at UKHQ can provide advice, support and guidance for your camping trip

How do I know whether my Scout meeting place is insured for the right value?

Rhodri Jones, Group Scout Leader

Ralph Doe, Unity (Scout Insurance Services), says:

You should insure your building for the full cost of rebuilding it. You should have it valued every three years and produce an inventory. Unity (Scout Insurance Services) can help by providing a free buildings estimation service and personal site visits for complex cases. Call Unity on 0345 040 7703 or visit tinyurl.com/mheea45 for more information.

The big issue

How can I bring adventure to my Group?

Gary Osborn, Group Scout Leader

James Stuttard, Programme Development Project Lead, says:

The revised programme is crammed with adventure because it's what leaders and young people said they enjoyed most about Scouting. Some of the highlights in the new Activity Badges for Beavers include the Sport and Camp Craft Badges; the Cubs have the fantastic Pioneering and Backwoods Cooking Badges, and the Scouts and Explorers can enjoy the new Geocaching and Survival Skills Badges. Not to mention the exciting range of Staged Activity Badges now available. Fifty percent of the changed programme should be done outside, where Scouting is at its best. An adventure doesn't have to be an expensive trip. When we spoke to Cubs as part of the programme review we were struck by how much they enjoy the simple things – playing a game outside in the dark with torches was enjoyed just as much as crate stacking! Talk with your young people, and plan an adventurous programme you'll all enjoy. With 147 new awards to choose from, it's going to be a fun 2015!

Emma Saunders, Programme Team Leader, says:

Remember that adventure means something different to everyone and so gives the opportunity for a wide range of activities to be offered to members of all ages. You don't have to take on Everest to provide adventure; you can offer an activity in a new way that can be equally adventurous. There are loads of resources available to support you, so head to Programmes Online (scouts.org.uk/pol).

As part of the programme updates there are new Outdoors and Adventure Challenge Awards to achieve along with a wider selection of Staged Activity Badges and updated Activity Badges. A great way to start these is to introduce young people at a basic level to grow their skills and confidence, we know that progression is key and so you can start with skill activities in the meeting place before getting outside and being more adventurous.

Across the country there are hundreds of activity centres, campsites and Scout Active Support Units, as well as individuals who are equipped to support this part of the programme. Find out who in your area can offer support or get ideas for new activities at scouts.org.uk/a-z. As with all Scouting activities, good planning, working with parent/carers and being flexible and creative will help to support the inclusion of all young people, regardless of ability.

10 TOP TIPS TO HELP YOU GET FIT

Are you struggling to keep up with your Scouts? Now you can boost your energy levels with our easy fitness tips from personal trainer Charlotte Ord

Squeezing exercise into your packed routine can be difficult, but there are some really effective and simple ways to ensure that physical activity becomes a daily feature for you. The benefits of exercise extend beyond being able to keep up with young people. Regular exercise conditions your cardiovascular system, boosts your strength and endurance, keeps your bones strong, helps you maintain a healthy weight, and protects you from a myriad of health conditions and diseases. It also releases mood-boosting endorphins, reduces stress levels, promotes better sleep, prevents cognitive decline and increases your confidence. But above all it inspires others, including your Scouts, to lead healthy, active lives, too.

Here are 10 top tips on how to make exercise a part of your daily routine:

1 Schedule it in

Whether you're a gym bunny, runner, fitness-DVD follower, cyclist or walker, booking time to exercise in your diary – just as you might an ordinary appointment – vastly increases the chances of you actually doing it. Be realistic and remember that short, frequent bursts of exercise are generally better for you than longer stints with less regularity.

2 Remind yourself

When you're juggling daily life and Scouting, exercise can be easy to forget. There are some fantastic phone apps available to remind you to complete health-boosting tasks throughout the day. For example, FITRA is a free app that's individually tailored and offers motivation, guidance and support in all areas of your health.

3 Rise and shine

Not everyone is a fan of getting up early, but going for a walk, run, cycle or swim before work or before breakfast on camp is a fantastic way to start the day. It also means that whatever the rest of the day brings, your workout is already in the bag and won't be skipped if you feel too tired or when something more pressing comes along.

4 Walk it out

Going for a brisk walk during your lunch break is an easy way to fit activity into your day and is also fantastic for your posture, particularly if you spend a lot of time sitting down. Prolonged periods of sitting can result in short, tight and weakened muscles that frequently contribute to bad backs, head and neck pain, so get up and move as often as you can during the day.

5 Take the active route

Simple swaps such as regularly taking the stairs rather than the lift can dramatically increase the amount of movement you get each day. You could also get off the train or bus a stop early and walk the rest of your way to incorporate additional activity without going out of your way. Why not try cycling, walking or even jogging to your Scout meetings? Small changes can make big differences.

day. The internet is also full of home and gym training programmes that are proven to achieve great results and are time efficient. An example is my own training programmes at roarresults.com.

8 Sleep

There are times in life when good sleep can be hard to come by, when you're on camp with 40 excited Scouts for example, but getting a proper night's sleep means that you'll be fresher and pumping and your body moving! There are loads of new programme materials and badges that include these activities, so why not give them a go?

10 You are what you eat

We all know it's hard to eat well when you're constantly on the go – particularly when you're working around Scout meetings or when you're on camp – but try to support your exercise endeavours with good nutrition. A clean, natural diet, free from processed foods, will help you feel energetic and enjoy everything that Scouting, and life, has to offer!

‘There are some really effective and simple ways to ensure that physical activity becomes a daily feature for you.’

6 Get support

There are lots of options available to help you feel supported and stay motivated, from personal trainers to reputable bootcamps and gym classes. Having an exercise buddy to train alongside can also help you stay on track. Why not join a class or a club with some of your fellow leaders? That way, you can motivate and support each other along the way.

more energetic to lead your Group. Sleep is also really important for muscle repair and regeneration after exercise and helps to regulate your cortisol levels, which have a direct impact on your body's propensity to store excess fat.

9 Have fun

Doing exercises and activities that you really enjoy is one of the most effective ways of ensuring that you stay consistent, so incorporating exercise into your Scouting is a great place to begin. Remember that being fit doesn't have to mean doing traditional workouts; you can dance, climb, swim, bike, box, skip or do anything that gets your heart

7 Try some TV

Fitness DVDs are a great way of working out at home and there are a number available that provide 10–15-minute workouts that you can fit in around your

The Yorkshire Three Peaks

A long test of mettle and a feast for the eyes, the Yorkshire Three Peaks Challenge is a continuous journey over moor and summit. It's a walk of three climaxes, namely the Dales high points of Ingleborough, Whernside and Pen-y-ghent. A thorough workout for navigation and stamina, aiming for the 12-hour goal is a great notch on anyone's life list of challenges.

The route

The climb up Pen-y-ghent builds slowly and is a perfect warm-up for the miles ahead, so take your time and find your rhythm gently. (A)

The Brackenbottom Path joins the Pennine Way at a shoulder overlooking Fawcett Moor, (B) after which the gradient steepens and a series of craggy steps are encountered, which may require hands for balance. The summit of Pen-y-ghent is crossed by a drystone wall, which aids navigation and offers some shelter on windy days. The route follows the Pennine Way a short distance off Pen-y-ghent then leaves it after the first steep section. A new engineered path aids the crossing of Horton Moor, which in the past has suffered badly from erosion and is very boggy. (C)

A new footpath diversion and footbridge carry the Three Peaks route around the north side of the farm at Nether Lodge. This action was taken to avoid disturbing farm activities. The last section up the Ribble Valley to Ribblesdale is unavoidably by road. On weekdays traffic is moderate but on weekends it can be very busy with fast traffic – bikers use this route as an unofficial circuit. Ribblesdale is also used as a start for the Three Peaks walk. There is parking if you get here early enough, and frequent train services. The Station Inn is very walker-friendly, offering food, drink and accommodation. (D)

The route traces the historic Ribblesdale viaduct. The viaduct is 32m/104ft high and 402m/1,320ft long, and is made up of 24 arches and is one of the great civil engineering feats in Yorkshire. The route passes beneath on the Dales high way onto the north-eastern flank of Whernside. The ascent of Whernside is mostly well-graded. (E) Like Pen-y-ghent, the summit is crossed by a wall, which aids navigation. Near the summit trig point is a substantial curved shelter. The route crosses the summit and descends steeply (though not by the old, direct path to the left a couple of hundred metres beyond the summit; this is badly eroded and is but nowhere near as steep as it looks and the path up it is very good, making the going a tad easier for tired legs. Ingleborough summit is littered with numerous archaeological remains in the form of a fort, cairns and walls – and it's well worth a look around if you have both the time and energy. The summit is marked by a big cairn with an adjacent trig point and cross shelter. (G)

It is surprisingly easy to become disoriented on Ingleborough's flat summit, even in good conditions, so make sure you take a bearing to clear it in the right direction and avoid frustrating errors. The extensive moorland and limestone pavement

'A long test of mettle and a feast for the eyes, this is a continuous journey over moor and summit.'

generally avoided) between Brunscar and Broadrake to the B6255. (F)

The Old Hill Inn in Chapel-le-Dale has been the downfall of many a Three Peaker. Its welcoming refreshments can easily seduce tired walkers into a longer stay: you have been warned! The shelved approach across the limestone of Southerscales Scars leads easily onto the northern flanks of Ingleborough. Don't be put off by its awesome sight – from this side Ingleborough is steep, of Sulber offers possibly the greatest opportunity for navigational error on the Three Peaks walk. There is a bewildering crossroads of paths, bridleways and sheep trods, and if you pick the wrong one you could easily end up way off route with a lot of extra walking to do when you least need it. The correct alignment is along the feature of Sulber Nick (H); but again take a bearing if you are in any doubt, as it is not that clear from the start.

Perfect partners

Scouts can look forward to some exciting new resources thanks to Victorinox

The Scout Association is working in partnership with global brand Victorinox, makers of the iconic Swiss Army Knife and suppliers of essential tools for millions of adventurers and pioneers around the world.

Swiss Army Knives and Scouting go hand in hand, and are essential tools in every Scout's survival kit. Victorinox is proud to be sponsoring the Scout Survival Skills Badge, which educates Scouts in how to be prepared for emergencies during life's everyday adventures. Discovering the outdoors in a safe way is an ethos shared by The Scout Association and Victorinox. The partnership aims to emphasise and educate young people on the importance of knife safety, giving them the opportunity to learn about responsible ownership when using a knife in Scouting.

Now available to download is a new resource that has been developed with Victorinox and Scout Leader bushcraft experts. It aims to give Scouts all the information and guidance they need when working towards their Scout Survival Skills Badge; including knife safety, how to build a fire and shelter from natural resources, administering emergency first aid and signalling for assistance in a survival situation. Two resource packs will be launched online each month until June, covering eight key topics. The final part of the badge requires Scouts to create their own survival kit, as well as plan and take part in an overnight survival expedition.

Reader recipe

Cinnamon campfire apples

Bolton Scout Leader Sarah Cavanagh shares one of her Troop's favourite recipes, perfect for cooking on the campfire after a long day of exploring

About the chef

Sarah is a Scout Leader from 16th Bolton Scouts. Her Group loves this sugary recipe – you can see why. She says they are usually so keen to get munching, they don't bother with step 6 at all!

Ingredients

Serves 12

- Cooking apples 12
- Tinfoil
- Sugar 12 tsp
- Cinnamon 6 tsp

Method

- 1 Wrap each apple in a piece of tinfoil.
- 2 If using a campfire, move back large burning embers to expose hot coals, and lay the apples directly on the coals.
- 3 Roll over after five minutes so both sides can bake, leave for another five minutes, then carefully remove from the campfire and allow to cool slightly.

- 4 Place the sugar and cinnamon in a large bowl and mix well.

- 5 Being careful not to burn your fingers, unwrap the apples and keep the tinfoil. Remove the skin from the apples and roll the peeled apples in the sugar and cinnamon mixture.

- 6 Re-wrap and replace on coals until the sugar and cinnamon have caramelised, or skip this step and enjoy straight away!

THE MEEK FAMILY

Tim, Kerry, Amy and Ella rejected the daily grind and set off on a full-time adventure...

Tell us how 100 Family Adventures came to be

Tim: 'As the girls got older, we started to think about making the most of our time, so we thought we'd have a year of doing adventures. We didn't have disposable income so a lot of them were free. We started with 52 ideas – one a week – but we decided to turn this into a list of 100 to keep us motivated. We told the local press about us sleeping in a tree tent for our hundredth adventure. An article was written and we got a bit of publicity. We then wrote the book together as a family.'

And now you're continuing the adventure full-time...

Kerry: 'It was a case of escaping the rut. We were just slotting into a routine that didn't feel natural. Initially, when the girls were younger, we just tried doing things differently, so instead of going the normal route to school, we'd leave 20 minutes earlier and go a different way.'

Tim: 'The barriers were our house, our jobs and school. We got rid of the barriers and reinvented ourselves as teachers and learners through adventure. In September we left to travel around the UK in a caravan.'

'Our girls were in Cubs and Scouts – they loved it and now we get to take that Scouting spirit and do it full-time. I think kids should feel cold, tired and hungry now and again – it makes you more resilient.'

'Scouts is great because it is about getting the kids outdoors and encouraging them to do things on their own – trying any new experiences.'

Why is being outdoors important?

Kerry: 'When the kids joined the Scouts they were immediately going outdoors and doing things. At the time we were swamped with work but dedicated time to going outdoors at the weekends. We all feel so much better when we've been outdoors; we're happier and we feel invigorated. The health benefits are extraordinary – both mentally and physically.'

Want more?

100 Family Adventures by Tim, Kerry, Amy and Ella Meek (Frances Lincoln, £14.99).

Read more about the Meek family at scouts.org.uk and check out their micro adventures at dotrythisathome.com.

Do Amy and Ella miss school?

Amy (age 11): 'You find your weaknesses when you're outdoors and overcome them and expand your comfort zone. It makes you feel alive. I don't think you really get that from being sat inside school or playing on a computer game at home.'

Ella (age 9): 'You learn to look after yourself and be independent when you're outdoors. You enjoy it so much that you want to do it again and you learn even more. At school it's more about safety and in the outdoors you get to do more – you learn things that will help you later on in life.'

'Now we get to take that Scouting spirit and do it full-time.'

Original. Traditional. Built to Last a Lifetime.
