Welcome

This guidance will help you make sure your buildings and facilities are safe when returning to face-to-face meetings and activities. If in doubt about any aspect, please seek the advice of a professional. More Scout guidance is available here.

This guidance should read in conjunction with The Scouts’ Framework, which explains the overall process.

Guidance on reopening commercial campsites can be found here.

Background

Many campsites and activity centres work with (or wish to work with) third parties such as schools, other youth organisations and members of the public. In all the examples above, and others not listed, there will be different guidance relevant to the organisation or for public use. However all of these will consistent with the overarching COVID-secure approach.

This guidance therefore cannot be exhaustive but aims to signpost advice, and pose questions to help you make an informed decision on how and to whom you may open your site and facilities.

Things to think about

When planning for reopening for third party/public use, you’ll need to consider and balance the following factors as we pass through each level of the National Youth Agency (NYA) scale and the updating of other guidance relevant to the third party you are working with or public access. In all cases you should check that you are insured for the activity you are undertaking and that you aren’t breaching local planning restrictions or operating outside the scope of The Scout Association’s exception certificate for campsite licensing.

- Can you reopen safely?
  - What’s the capacity of your site (physical space, toilet provision, hand washing facilities) when operating within the restrictions at each level and considering the expectations of different user groups?
  - Can the roads and car parks cope with the potential increase in traffic?
  - Can you keep volunteers and staff involved in the running of the centre safe?

- What you can offer at each level of the scale?
  - Which activities and services can you offer in line with government guidance and/or social distancing restrictions at each level or are you just offering space?
  - Can you provide enough qualified people to run them if required?

- Can you operate adventurous activity in line with the relevant external advice?

- What’s the PR benefit of being open?
  - Does the change in activity create a negative impact on neighbours or locals in the surrounding area?
  - How would someone external seeing the activity happening perceive this considering the guidance currently in force?

- What are the financial implications of opening vs staying closed at each level?

- Under the track and trace guidance you have a duty to keep at least the contact details for the party leader of each visiting group for 21 days but also a responsibility to keep a log of who was working when and what time including any significant contact they had with any groups or individuals
